We all know that strong emotions have a powerful physical effect. Feeling nervous before an important interview can send you rushing to the bathroom, while a sudden attack of anxiety can send your heart racing and leave you feeling faint and dizzy. But new research has revealed the incredible healing power of the brain and how learning to relax and think positively can have dramatic health benefits. ()

And there is now overwhelming evidence that your mental and emotional state can also have a direct impact on your body's ability to fight disease and cope with pain.

Bob Lewin, Professor of Rehabilitation at York University, took a group of heart patients through an eight-week angina management program which included stress management, relaxation techniques, goal-setting, yoga and exercise. The results were staggering. Fifty per cent of the patients who had been on waiting lists for bypass surgery were taken off by their cardiologists who decided they no longer needed it. So how do you make it work for you? Well, it's far more complex than just learning to look on the bright side. () The key variable in patients getting well is the extent to which they feel in control of their own emotions. Reorganizing your life and learning self-help techniques can help put you back in control of these.
